PRACTICE GROUP

- Litigation

Rachel is a member of O'Neil Cannon's Litigation Practice Group. She enjoys helping clients navigate complex legal challenges and is drawn to matters that require thoughtful analysis, strong advocacy, and practical problem-solving. Rachel's experience spans private practice, government, in-house legal work, and public service, giving her a broad perspective on the legal issues individuals and businesses face. Whether assisting with litigation strategy, legal research, trial preparation, or dispute resolution, she is committed to understanding each client's goals and providing practical guidance through difficult situations. Her background in criminal, civil, appellate, employment, and regulatory matters has strengthened her ability to approach cases from multiple angles and advocate effectively on behalf of her clients.
